ROCKEFELLER, JR.

On the first page of this issue, The Citizen gives to its readers a cut and account of John D. Rockefeller, Jr. This young man is 35 years of age, at which time of life he should not yet have reached his prime, either mentally or physically. But, according to report, young Rockefeller is a confirmed invalid from acute nervous dyspepsia, and is compelled at his early age to retire entirely from business.

It is said, and doubtless the saying is true, that young Rockefeller has not brought the disease upon himself by improper living. He has not been a drinker. He has not been devoted to rich banquets. He is said to be so fond of no other viands as he is of pumpkin pie and milk. He has not stayed out late at nights. He has devoted his life substance in lascivious practices. He is devoted to his wife, his Sunday school class, his home and to quiet, orderly living. His life has been as blameless and exemplary as that of the young men in the Sunday school story books.

What then is the cause of this break down, this collapse? Some are ready to say, and have already thought, that it is a direct visitation of providence visiting the sins of the father upon the son. Such answer cannot be entertained. Some 2,000 years ago the world was taught by Hymn "who spoke as never man spoke," that those on whom the tower of Siloam fell and saw them, or those whose blood Pilate mingled with their sacrifices, were not sinners above all their fellows. We must look deeper for the cause we are seeking.

This young man is the only direct male heir to the largest single fortune in the world, and he has been rigidly drilled for the responsibility. It is well known that one of the father's fondest hopes has been that the son should be fitted to manage successfully the vast business interests that would devolve upon him.

You have heard of athletes, overtrained, who break down on the eve of the supreme contest. Well, the fact seems to be that Rockefeller, Jr., lacked the capacity to handle the large affairs entrusted by his father to his management, and, being conscientious, worried about it, until the worry augmented an inherited weakness of stomach. This greatest heir in the world had a double legacy—of fortune that worried him and a weak stomach that failed him. No doubt his method of life combined with the other cause, the worry arising from conscious incompetency, had much to do with the early collapse. He lacked sufficient recreation and amusement. He lived too far away from nature. No doubt if after the doctors and watering places and leisure have patched him up a little, if he will make his way overland to a New Mexico cattle ranch, and there become a real cowboy, living and working as they do, three or four years will give him a new lease of life.

NOT OUR WAY

In Berlin they have introduced a unique method of caring for the drunkards that lie about the streets. A corps of women form the service. They go about in couples, and assist the helpless ones to the police stations.

Says Public opinion: "It is certainly significant that women should be chosen for this work. The object is to have her appeal to the intoxicated man entirely by virtue of her womanhood."

Well, it certainly is significant—significant of Europe, where women are small potatoes. You will notice the appeal is to the intoxicated one. The "pleasure is all his." How would you like some of your woman relations to hold that job? It will strike American minds that when a man is drunk it is a decidedly peculiar time to attempt an appeal to him "entirely by virtue of womanhood." Maybe it's all right. But in America, when he comes staggering down the street, his brain sodden and his breath reeking, who love our women will try to shield them from the disgusting sight. And then we'll call a policeman.

The Morning Journal today had a 76-line editorial headed "Reductio ad Absurdum." Following the example of that paper The Citizen might say that so much use of space was entirely unnecessary, as almost any editorial in "our esteemed contemporary" would amply illustrate the principle of logic cited. But this writer, while not a stranger to editorial controversies, has never suffered himself, at the demands of supposed humor or sophistical arguments, to forget the restraining bands of truth. The legal conditions of New Mexico can be reduced to absurdity both in theory and fact. Our supreme bench ought not to be composed of the district judges. But it is so composed, and probably will remain so till the territory secures statehood.

"There is a tide in the affairs of men, which taken at its flood leads on to fortune." Thus did the bard of Avon put words in the mouth of his stage people, four hundred years ago, and quite as well might he have made it "in affairs of state." Let us think: Is not this opportunity for joint statehood the tide in the affairs of New Mexico and Arizona, which, if taken at its flood, will lead their people on to fortune, and if omitted, all the voyage of their political lives will be bound in shallows and in miseries? Shall they let a few interested parties thwart their destinies? People of New Mexico and Arizona, look well to your interests at this time of flood tide. Don't let it pass.

The Washington Post is informed by a reliable correspondent, who has knowledge of Equitable affairs, that this company has for years maintained a fund called "protection fund," which has been used to prevent inimical legislation at Albany. He adds that he has no doubt that the $600,000 for which Senator Depew was responsible was money placed in his hands for political purposes, with a view to protecting the Equitable from "improper legislation." The "protection fund" was created specifically for that purpose. Can there be any doubt that the other insurance companies in New York were compelled to protect themselves against legislative grafters in the same way?

China, it is said, has learned from the civilized world the effects of bomb-throwing, and has commenced the practice of it; but in that, as in everything else, they go directly contrary to the practice of the Caucasian. Among the white races, bombs are thrown at those who retard development of the race, by trying to hold all things in statu quo. In China, however, the bombs were thrown by the mobocrats, and the victims were the commissioners appointed by the Chinese government to visit western nations and learn our advanced ways.

President J. J. Hill seems to have been talking a good deal recently. One of his reported utterances is: "This fallacy that the United States is getting control of the markets of the world needs to be studied and honestly answered. Because our highly protected manufacturers are able, by reason of the high prices they charge you, to send abroad a certain portion of their output, and sell it for half what you pay, we are not conquering the commercial world."

The friends of joint statehood should make it a point that the congressional party shortly to visit this territory and Arizona, shall not return east with only the officeholders' statements as to wishes of the people concerning jointure.

The Evening Herald, in its last issue, renounces its allegiance to the democratic party, and announces its intention of going it alone. However, the Roswell Record still remains among the faithful.

At the age of thirty-eight, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is broken down with dyspepsia. What shall it profit a man if he inherits all the millions of the universe and his stomach goes back on him?

HAST THOU A LAMP PUT

IN THAT HAND OF THINE?

By Sarah Pratt McLean Green

Hast thou a lamp, a little lamp,
Put in that hand of thine?
And did he say, who gave it thee,
The world hath need this light should be,
Now, therefore, let it shine?

And dost thou say, with bated breath,
It is a little flame;
I'd let the lamps of broader wick
Seek out the lost and cheer the sick,
While I seek wealth and fame?

But on the shore where thy small house
Stands dark, stands dark, this night,
Full many a wanderer, thither tossed,
Is driven on that rock and lost,
Where thou hast hid thy light.

Though but a candle thou didst have,
Its trimmed and glowing ray
Is infinite. With God, no light
Is great or small, but only bright,
As is his perfect day.

The world hath sorrow, nothing more
To give or keep for thee;
Duty is in that hidden flame,
And soaring joy; then rise for shame
That thou so dark shouldst be.

Rise, trim thy lamp; the feeble past
Behind thee put and spurn.
With God it is not soon or late,
So that thy light, now flaming great,
Doth ever fiercer burn.

Fierce with its love, and flaming great
In its humility;
Shunning no soul in sinful need,
Fearing no path where he may lead,
Glowing consumingly.

Thou shalt not want for light enough,
When earthly moons grow dim;
The dawn is just begun for thee,
When thou shalt hand, so tremblingly,
The empty lamp to him.

PITH OF TROUBLE BETWEEN HUNGARY AND AUSTRIA

Hungary, at present, does not seek independence from Austria.

It wants a separate Hungarian army.

It demands that the Magyar tongue shall be the language in command.

Ultimately the intention is to maintain a mere alliance between the two countries, dissolving the commercial partnership.

The link between the two would then consist only of the emperor-king's personal sovereignty.

Emperor Franz Joseph has steadfastly resisted all demands curtailing Austrian power.

The result is a deadlock, which threatens a war of secession.

Should Hungary revolt it is probable Bohemia will follow.

A breaking up of the Austrian empire would probably throw the old duchy of Austria into the German empire.

Franz Joseph is emperor of Austria and king of Hungary, commanding the common army.

Naval and military matters, foreign affairs, customs and currency are supposed to be administered in common.

This dual system was adopted by the ausgleich (agreement) of 1867.

Franz Joseph has only been able to maintain the ausgleichs (agreements) not only between Hungary and Austria, but between the seventeen crown lands represented in the reichsrath at Vienna, by personal influence, and by playing off the different factions against each other.

The ministers are practically the servants of the emperor, though in law they are responsible to the parliament.

Partisan strife has frequently allowed the emperor to block all legislation for months at a time, thus affording him opportunities to make laws and issue decrees as he pleased.

To all intents and purposes, owing to the manipulations of the emperor and his minister servants, Hungary is now a country without any government recognized by the people.

At present the army, while recruited among Hungarians, is commanded mainly by Austrians, commanded in German, and the colors are Austrian.

In the eyes of Hungarians this army makes Hungary look like a conquered country.

In 1900, Hungary and Transylvania had a population of 16,768,143; Bohemia, 6,318,280; the rest of the empire, 22,224,412.

Area in square miles: Hungary and Transylvania, 103,258; Bohemia, 20,060; rest of Austria, 220,882.

SOME STORIES WISE AND SOME OTHERWISE

Not Worth His Salt.

"When we say that a man is not worth his salt," said a philologist, "we use an interesting and classic form of speech," says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. "We go all the way back, in fact, to the time of the ancient Romans."

"The Roman workers in the salt mines were paid in salt. The salt that they got in return for their labor was called their salarium (salt—salt), or salt allowance."

"The word salarium, meaning salt money, or allowance for salt, later on was applied to the fees, or tips, men got for odd jobs. 'For patching my toga,' the noble said, 'I will give that fellow a slight salarium—a bit of money to buy salt with.'"

"Finally 'salarium' came to mean wages, salary, what it does today. A salary is essentially salt money, and when we say a man is not worth his salt we mean he is not worth paying wage to."

In a Public School.

It was a warm day just before the end of the term, and the youthful teacher is telling a class of 6-year-olds in the Tenderloin what a prison is.

The cube and sphere are an old story to them now, but the prison is more difficult.

The teacher spends twenty minutes in strenuous illustration and explanation. Then she asks hopefully: "Boys, are you sure that you all know what a prison is?"

"Yes, Ma'am," chorus the fifty.

"Then Johnnie O'Neill, you may use it in a sentence."

Up rises Johnnie and he announces with perfect confidence.

"Me brudder Chimmie is in prison for six months."

WILL READ PAPER BEFORE AMERICAN MINING CONGRESS

Dr. F. A. Jones, the mining engineer, returned this morning from a professional trip to Lordsburg, in the southern part of the territory. Mining around Lordsburg has become quite lively recently, especially where old properties are concerned. Many mines of the district that have been dead for years are being reopened and in many instances these properties promise to be good producers.

Dr. Jones was recently requested to read a paper before the American Mining Congress, which will meet in El Paso in November. The doctor says that he will comply and will take as his subject the mining resources of New Mexico.
